CITY COUNCIL

Another Light Franchise Ordinance Is Introduced.

City council met in regular session last night, Mayor Kite presiding and all councilmen present. After the minutes were read and approved the business before the council was taken up. The chief thing of interest before the council was the electric light franchise and the third ordinance was introduced.

Brethauer called attention to poor lights in council chamber and the chief of police was ordered to look after same.

On motion of Robertson the street commissioner was ordered to bring in and store the park seats.

Jackson presented a petition signed by W. J. Houchen, Samuel Nicholson, Ed VonFange and others for a petition for a water hydrant and arc light at the intersection of Ninth and Pine streets. The petition was referred to a committee consisting of Weaver, Brethauer and Jerrell with instructions to report to the Board of Public Works. The committee was instructed to look over the city and report on other hydrants needed.

Ahlert handed up an ordinance which was read by the clerk. This is an ordinance to grant to J. W. Esterline, Albert E. Berdon, Thos. Duncan and W. Bent Wilson, all of Lafayette, a franchise to construct, operate and maintain an electric light system in the city of Seymour. The period of the proposed franchise is for twenty years. Plant to be constructed and in operation within eight months from the date of the passage and acceptance of the ordinance. The rates proposed are as follows:

Commercial arc lights from dusk to 11 p. m. every night at $3 a month. The incandescent rates proposed for commercial use are as follows:
First 50 one thousand watt-hours, 10 cents per 1000 watt-hours, next 100 one thousand watt-hours 8 cents; next 250 one thousand watt-hours 7 cents; next 500 one thousand watt-hours 6 cents; all over 900 one thousand watt-hours 5 cents. Discount of 10 per cent for prompt payment.

Residence rate for incandescent lights varies from 12 cents to 8 cents per 1000 watt-hours according to amount used. Discount of 10 per cent. for prompt payment of monthly light bills.

Rates for power use vary from 8 cents to 3 cents per 1000 watt-hours according to amount used. Discount of 10 per cent for prompt payment of bill.

This franchise provides for service twenty-four hours in the day, so that light users could turn on a light at any time needed. The plant would be in duplicate so that if machinery broke there would be reserve power so that light could be supplied just the same.

J. W. Esterline, president of the Esterline Electric Company, of Lafayette, was present and at the request of E. P. Elsner was granted permission to address the council. He said their company meant business and if a franchise is granted them they would begin construction work at once. He said they were not in the franchise jobbing business, but their business is to build and operate light plants. He said the rates proposed in this franchise were lower than any offered

DYNAMITE

Explosion Causes Big Loss to Illinois City.

SPECIAL TO THE REPUBLICAN

DANVILLE, ILL., Nov. 23.—Six buildings were completely wrecked here last night by a dynamite explosion followed by a fire. Twenty-five other buildings were partly wrecked by the force of the explosion. The total loss is estimated at $50,000.

Dynamite was exploded in the fruit and wine house belonging to Jos. Mascari. The police believe it was a Black Hand attempt to destroy Mascari. Two Italians suspected were seen to leave the building before the explosion. The mayor will offer a reward of $1000 for the arrest of the guilty parties. Four Italians are believed to be buried in the ruins.

Fire broke out after the explosion and the firemen were several hours getting it under control.

Roof Blown From Church.

The roof was blown from the Christian church at Austin Monday afternoon during the windstorm and landed on the interurban track. The cars were delayed for several minutes and the overhead men were called out from Scottsburg to make some repairs on the wires. The company's telephone lines were put out of commission for some time and orders could not be received here from the car barns except over the other long distance telephone lines. The church roof was lifted up and set over on the tracks.

Part of the roof was also blown off the public school building. The wind was strong elsewhere in Scott county but the damage was less serious. Trees and corn shocks were blown down and the telephone lines were down in many places. The wind and rain were followed by a hailstorm which lasted for fifteen minutes. There has been but little damage reported from the storm in this county. The wind was very strong at Crothersville, but there was no damage.

Grocery Changes Hands.

The Russell grocery store at the corner of Broadway and Second streets, has changed hands again and is now owned by D. C. Newsom, a prominent real estate dealer and liveryman, of Elizabethtown. His son, Roy Newsom, is already here and took charge of the store Monday morning. Mr. Russell will remain in the store until Mr. Newsom gets a good start with the business. Mr. Russell traded the store and his residence located on E. Second street, not many days ago, to Frank J. Prevot, formerly of North Vernon, for 120 acres of land in Jennings county. He has not decided yet definitely what he will do but may move to the farm next spring.

Foot Ball.

The foot ball game between the Seymour high school and the Franklin high school, which was played at Franklin Saturday afternoon, resulted in a victory for Franklin by a score of 10 to 0.

Chas. Brock, druggist at Browns-town, was in the city last evening enroute home from a business trip to Crothersville.

Miss Lottie Kirsch spent Monday evening at Crothersville.

Miss Josephine Peek was here from Hayden this afternoon.

Mrs. Minnie Gardner was a passenger to Columbus Monday.

DIED.

WILKINS — Mrs. Nora Wilkins, wife of Henry Wilkins, died at their home in Indianapolis Sunday evening about 10:15 after an extended illness with lung trouble. Age about 49 years. She leaves a husband and family to mourn her loss. She was a daughter of J. H. Robbins, of Rockford. The remains will be brought to Seymour on the traction line Wednesday morning about nine o'clock and taken directly to Riverview cemetery for interment.

Practical Demonstration.

R. B. Ryall, of the Purdue Experimental Station held a practical demonstration in the care of orchards a half mile east of Seymour today for the benefit of fruit growers. The demonstration in the forenoon took place in the orchard of J. T. Foster, where the best methods in pruning the trees were shown. This afternoon a practical demonstration in spraying the trees was given in the orchard of Frank Miller. Questions were asked and freely answered, and the demonstration was very valuable to the farmers. Mr. Ryall who is sent out under the direction of Purdue University is a capable young man and thoroughly acquainted with the work.

New Buildings.

The Union Hardware Company is building a two-room addition and a veranda to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kiel, of near Jonesville; and furnishing the material for an addition to W. G. Hutchinson's store room on W. Brown street; a one-room addition to the residence property of Martin Siefker, at Pine and Laurel; a two-room addition with two verandas to the residence of Mrs. Lizzie Stockhoff on E. Fifth street; a three-room residence for Samuel Story, Jr., near the Rinehart school-house; and a new bakery for Henry Resimer on S. Walnut street; besides numerous other improvements. This is evidence that building business continues good in Seymour.

China Shower.

A china shower was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Prewitt, 517 W. Jackson street, in honor of Miss Minnie Kessler, whose marriage shall occur in the near future to Philip Thompson. The guests presented the bride elect with a beautiful dinner set. The evening was spent in playing games, also, some excellent music was rendered. Refreshments were served and all departed at a late hour, wishing the bride-elect happiness in her future life.

Local Option Election.

The voters of Scott county are deciding today by their ballots whether the county is to be with or without the open saloon during the next two years. The county has already been dry by remonstrance for several months and the wets would surprise themselves if they should win. When the town is "dry" it is hardly likely that the farmers will vote it "wet." The "drys" claim they are sure of carrying at least three of the fine townships and many claim that there is but one township in doubt. With these conditions existing and the results in the most populous township not being in doubt, except as to the size of the majorities, it would seem that a "dry" victory is assured beyond a reasonable doubt. If the county should do anything else than vote dry it will be the first county in the state to remonstrate the saloons out then vote them back in. Mr. Powers, of Columbus, O., who has been speaking in the county every night for a week, closed the campaign Monday night with an illustrated lecture given in the Methodist church at Scottsburg. The seating capacity of the church was well filled and the large audience listened attentively for more than an hour and a half. Mr. Powers left on the late train for Warren county where he will lecture every night with their election one week from today.

Notwithstanding the fact that he has succeeded in making several million dollars during the few months that have elapsed since he was released on bail from prison, ex-Banker Morse may have to serve the term to which he was sentenced when he was found guilty of violating the banking laws. There are ever increasing signs that the ability to make money is not to be permitted to serve as an excuse in this country for being a swindler.

The pole is nothing. It is a negation. It is a geographical paradox and absurdity. Whether it be land buried under perpetual snow or water covered deep with never-melting ice, it is the one place on earth where there is no north or east or west, but all directions alike are south. It is the place where one day is a year long, and the year is a day. The familiar constellations of the stars of our hemisphere sweep round it in altered guises and relations, never varying in height above the horizon. Nothing in nature marks the passage of time except the slow coming and withdrawing of the sun. The compass needle still points to a north, which there is south—to a long-ago discovered point in our hemisphere which moves westward at a known and predictable pace.

Who says that the ordinary Englishman is not sentimental? In August the last cable street line was discontinued and the electric tram of the London County Council took its place. The cable line was also the first in Europe, for it was opened in 1884, over Highgate Hill, in the extreme northerly suburbs of London. The occasion of the discontinuance of the line was marked by an astonishing demonstration. Great crowds assembled along the line on the evening when the last cars were run, and each car was cheered as it left the foot of the hill on its journey. Toward the end of the evening every car was so crowded that it was impossible to collect fares. Each car as it went off service was greeted with "Auld Lang Syne," sung by the bystanders, led by a man playing a cornet. Men and women fought to get on the last car, and most of them were provided with colored lights, firecrackers and sticks, which they used to increase the boisterousness of the demonstration. It seems to have been an occasion not so much of rejoicing, that a better system of transportation was to be established as of a sentimental leave-taking of an old friend.

Theorists have often proposed extra taxation on the bachelor, and legislatures have even considered, more or less seriously, bills imposing heavier burdens on the unmarried men. But, thus far, the hard-hearts have escaped such a fate. Yet, in England, where the search for new sorts of taxes is unrelenting, the plan is once more seriously broached. The argument in favor of a bachelor tax is irrefragable. Here is a man who is dodging his duties to the state; who is living in happy but selfish singleness. The life and health of a nation depends in greater degree upon its birthrate than upon any other one thing. If the birth rate is declining, the nation is looked upon as decadent and dying. The married man is the solid citizen. He is settled in life and has a serious stake in the community. He has a family for which to labor, and is imbued with ambitions that are of the greatest importance to the state, to the nation, and to the world. But the bachelor is a shirk, a mere lodger. He gives to the state no progeny; he develops no home; he does not become a taxpayer. He is the man-about-town. Of course, there are individual exceptions—the bachelor who is supporting mother or sisters, the bachelor who is physically unfitted to marry, and the bachelor who cannot find a woman who will wed him. But in the mass, the bachelor is not a productive, taxpaying citizen. He is shirking part of the whole duty of man. An obvious device to drive the bachelor into matrimony is to make him pay for the privilege of shirking. But there are difficulties in the way. Would it be constitutional to tax him because he did not care to commit matrimony? How could the exceptional cases be taken care of? Perhaps a better way of encouraging matrimonial enterprise would be to favor the married man in various ways. This is already done in many cases. If work is scarce, the city gives the preference to the married man. Many business establishments give a similar preference. In France, there are some privileges enjoyed by the man who has a large family. If men of family were favored by the remission of certain taxes, or given privileges, it would be tantamount to taxation of those without family, but the taxation would be indirect and, therefore, easy.

LIPTON'S PUBLICITY METHODS.

Says There Is Much Virtue In Advertising and Quick Action.

"I dare say I owe a great deal of my success to advertising," says Sir Thomas Lipton in the Strand. "I always tried to get hold of some new method. To attract attention I used to post cartoons in my shop window. In later years, when my business had spread on one occasion I engaged an aeronaut to throw out from his car 10,000 telegraph messages addressed to one of my shops. I offered prizes to the first twenty people who arrived with a message, and the finders coming from all parts of the city, much popular interest resulted.

"Advertisement sometimes, as I have found, results most unexpectedly and from untoward conditions. About 6 I was awakened by the telephone bell ringing in my bedroom. Springing out of bed, I soon learned that a fire had broken out at my Newry branch. On arrival at the scene of the fire I found nothing could be saved, so I immediately telegraphed to my Dublin and Belfast stores and ordered a fresh stock of provisions to be sent by passenger trains. Meanwhile I found another shop close by, and at the usual hour the following morning I had the new premises in full working order. And there was more business done at the second shop than at the first. The fire, it appeared, had drawn public attention to us, and our smartness in opening another shop so quickly was practically appreciated."

American Colleges.

The American college is in every way unique. It may be defined in a word as a school for imparting more general and advanced instruction than can be obtained in the various academies and private schools. The university, however, more particularly comprises a number of technical schools imparting instruction in all departments of knowledge, including classical literature, the arts and sciences, as biology, medicine, surgery, law, theology, mechanics and so on. The issue as to which is the most desirable, the most useful, has been discussed at educational congresses, in the public press and notably in the leading reviews. There has been evident in these discussions a tendency to look upon the college as a kind of inferior school which must be given its place only when there is not enough money to establish the more expensive university. On the other hand, the college has not wanted its stout champions, in whose view the American college, with its concentrated curriculum, the closeness of touch between pupil and professor, is not only an institution that is to be conserved, but is one that often, if not always, offers a better kind of education than is available in the university.—Leslie's Weekly.

Married women are bracing up; they are looking more like girls than ever before. They are getting rid of that tired, weary, disgusted look.

12 AMERICAN WOMEN OWN A HALF BILLION

MANY CANNOT SPEND INTEREST

Dispose of Large Sums in Various Ways, but Cannot Reduce Their Fortunes.

When Edward H. Harriman, the dead railroad wizard, wrote his famous ninety-four-word will he made his widow the richest among twelve very rich American women, whose wealth totals half a billion dollars. The largest fortunes held by women in this country have been catalogued as follows:

Mrs. E. H. Harriman	$5,000,000
Mrs. Hetty Green	$3,000,000
Mrs. F. C. Penfield	$2,000,000
Mrs. Russell Sage	$1,500,000
Mrs. Phoebe Hearst	$1,000,000
Mrs. Nonnie Leeds	$1,000,000
Mrs. Matilda Ziegler	$1,000,000
Mrs. Morris K. Jesup	$1,000,000
Miss Helen Gould	$1,000,000
Miss Giulia Morosini	$1,000,000
Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw	$1,000,000
Mrs. T. B. Wanamaker	$1,000,000

Their total wealth $50,000,000. Most of Mrs. Harriman's $85,000,000 estate is in stocks, bonds and cash. With one exception the other eleven have put their riches into bonds—low interest bearing, but strong as steel armor.

Rockefeller, the steel trust and other great holders of capital have invested in huge industries which give employment to hundreds of thousands of men. It draws its profit for the investor, and it gives its added benefit to the public. But in the case of these twelve richest women the money is an intense burden to the world of commerce and trade, and it is also a greater burden to the owners of it.

Take the case of Mrs. Harriman, for instance. A kindly, sweet-faced, elderly woman, schooled more to her home than to society, suddenly finds herself the richest woman in the world.

The mind of one man—Harriman—was sufficient to steer this ship of wealth among the uncharted shoals of Wall street during life. Dead, the minds of many men, lawyers and high financiers, are required to help the widow change her great $85,000,000 estate into low interest bearing securities.

Huge Body of Gold.

Who are these twelve rich women? What do they do with their wealth? What can they do with it?

Some of these twelve, like Mrs. Sage, Mrs. Hearst and Miss Gould, distribute huge sums in philanthropy. But, try as they will, they cannot give it away as fast as it is increasing. Like a snowball descending a hill, this big body of wealth keeps growing.

This country may have no Bank of England, but in the wealth of its twelve richest women there is a sum of money—a body of gold—that is larger than that bank's resources.

Miss Anne Weightman, daughter of the Philadelphia quinine king, was married to Frederick C. Penfield, an attorney, and the management of her wealth fell upon him. Mrs. Hetty Green turned over to her son for management a big block of her money. Mrs. Green herself doesn't want to see her money decrease. She is the only one of the twelve who has made her money herself. Most of it, too, is invested in good real estate rather than bonds, although she is a heavy bondholder, too.

Mrs. Russell Sage proposed to give most of her fortune away. She founded $20,000,000 of benevolences and found the time it takes to direct them would prevent further gifts at present. Meanwhile her wealth is drawing an income of more than $2,500,000 a year.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, widow of the California Senator, has given $7,000,000 to philanthropy and education. She is reported to have sunk a similar sum in her son's newspaper ventures, yet her fortune to-day is greater than ever it was.

Mrs. Nonnie Leeds bought in Paris a black pearl which even King Edward VII. could not afford. Her expenditures on gems have been enormous, without any decrease in her income.

Mrs. Matilda Ziegler and Mrs. Morris K. Jesup both were left legacies by men who in life have been noted for charity. They have continued the work of their husbands, but their wealth continues automatically.

Miss Helen Gould has devoted her life to expending Jay Gould's gift to her of $18,000,000. Her benefactions are scattered over the United States, but she is wealthier every year.

Best Dressed Woman.

The best dressed woman of these twelve rich women is Miss Giulia Morosini, who spends more than $100,000 a year for gowns. All her dresses and the blooded horses she owns can't begin to stop the golden flood that pours in on her every interest day.

One woman alone of these twelve—the black-clothed figure of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw—has found that her money brought her sadness. The trouble of her son has taken much of her wealth, but the $10,000,000 that William Thaw willed her has grown to $12,000,000.

Mrs. Thomas B. Wanamaker will find herself worth $20,000,000 within ten years, if her income grows as it has done.

Does this half billion, which is mounting higher and higher every year, constitute a menace to the country? Or does it give it a stability that the banks lack, by reason of that vast horde of gold, which no one spends, nor no one cares to spend? Only the future can tell.

A Lavender Town.

One of the minor harvests that promise well is that of the lavender fields. I have seen some flourishing crops in the Hitchin neighborhood today. Comparatively few know of this quaint Hertfordshire town as an important lavender growing center, yet it has grown the sweet old herb (which the Romans called lavendula) when they used it to scent their baths, has distilled the flowers and sent their extract into all parts of the world for more than a century. The Hitchin district had less rain and more sunshine than the London area during the month which has just closed, and consequently the long, trim rows of lavender plants in their dusky green look strong and healthy. They are beginning to show their flower buds, and there is every likelihood of an abundant yield at cutting time, which will be from three to four weeks hence. At cutting time people come in from miles around to inhale the sweetness of the fields, and when the distilling begins the fragrance of lavender is borne on the wind two miles or more from the town. The flowers are put into the still with the fresh bloom of their maturity on them, and from six pounds of such flowers about half an ounce of oil is extracted.—London Daily Mail.

Muscular Rheumatism.

Many physicians think that the soreness and aching in the muscles which are usually called muscular rheumatism are really not rheumatism at all, but neuralgia. For this reason they prefer to call the affection by its other name, myalgia, which means nothing more than muscular pain. It probably belongs, nevertheless, to the indefinite group of diseases called rheumatic, for it occurs frequently in persons who have other rheumatic or gouty troubles, or in whose family these affections prevail; and it is excited by the same things—exposure to cold and damp, for example; overfatigue, indiscretions in eating or drinking—that are believed to bring on an attack of rheumatism in the joints.

Any or all the muscles may be the seat of myalgia, but those most commonly affected are the muscles of the neck, of the shoulder and of the loins. In children it often takes the form of stiff neck, while in persons of middle life the muscles of the loins are not infrequently attacked, constituting what is known, and dreaded by those who have had previous attacks, as lumbago.

When the chest muscles are affected—or the sufferer has "a stitch in the side," or pleurodynia—the pain may be as acute as to simulate pneumonia or pleurisy.

The chief symptoms of muscular rheumatism is pain in the muscles affected, not usually very severe when the parts are at rest, but sometimes excruciating on attempted motion. A light touch may be painful, while deep and firm pressure gives relief.

The acute attack usually begins suddenly, and the pain attains its full severity at the beginning, growing gradually less in the course of two or three days or a week.

In the chronic form there is almost always some soreness and aching in the affected muscles—worse in raw, damp weather.

The internal treatment is the same as for rheumatism of the joints—which is another argument in favor of the belief that the two forms are essentially the same and due to the same cause.

The pain may be relieved by dry heat—the old-fashioned treatment of lumbago by ironing the back is good, although a hot-water bag or a hot brick will do just as well, without the disturbance that the movement of the iron causes.

Perfect rest is essential, and this may sometimes be secured by bandaging the affected part snugly.—Youths Companion.

INTERNATIONAL WAR.

Battle Between Tars Ended by Peleemman's Intervention.

A sailor from a British ship stood in Broad street the other morning gazing at the towering buildings, the New York Sun says. Moved by the thoughts which arose in him he remarked to the world at large: "We could stand off your bloomin' 'Ook and smash these 'ere skyscrapers while we was tykin' tea."

A sailor from an American warship cruising without much seeming purpose overheard the remark, drew up alongside the speaker and said: "You couldn't hit the whole State of New York if you had smooth water and all day to find the range."

"Several people stopped; a policeman drew near."

"Why not?" asked the Britisher.

"Because of that," replied the Yankee.

"That" was a well-directed blow which landed on the Briton's chin and which drew a counter equally well aimed at the Yankee's chin. Neither was very swift, possibly because of a certain degree of fatigue noted in both sailors produced by over-indulgence in sight-seeing.

The policeman took each sailor by a shoulder, shoved one north and one south and said: "G'wan!" The sailors g'waned a little, but, moved by a common purpose, circled the officer and presently had exchanged blows again.

The patient cop again separated and launched them in opposite directions, but now he kept an eye on their movements. Seeing them, with an exhibition of his own degree of patience, again coming to close quarters, he intervened.

"See here, lads," he said, holding them apart, "you must g'wan."

"I can knock his block off," the Yankee declared.

"H'd be doin' some't w'ile 'e's doing that," declared the Briton.

"You don't want me to run you in," the copper urged. "Go back to your ships."

"I'd go, but I 'aven't a tuppence in me trousers for the tube," said the Briton.

"And I haven't a nickel in my jeans for car fare, neither," the Yankee said.

The copper sighed softly, produced two nickels and gave each sailor one. The tars locked arms and swung off toward the Wall street underground station.

"I say, Jack, your bobbies are a proper sort," remarked the Briton.

"You bet your life they are," responded the Yankee.

PROGRESSIVE ART.

Even the humblest and least valued forms of "art" may possess an adaptability which, when influenced by affection, can accomplish remarkable results. Miss Webster, from a northeastern State, sojourning in a small village in the southwestern part of the country, found herself in neighborly relations with the Widow Nafe, devoted mother of one son, Lorenzo.

Her first visit to the widow's home was almost wholly taken up in enforced admiration of the newly acquired crayon portrait of Lorenzo, accompanied by details of the cost and the negotiations of purchase. In the "enlargement" from the tintype, the mustache, the pride of Lorenzo's mother's heart, had been made to assume great prominence.

Calling again some time later, Miss Webster was even more startled by the bearded features of the portrait.

"Why, Mrs. Nafe," she exclaimed, rather bewildered, "you've been getting another picture of your son!"

"No, 'tain't new—same old picture," said Mrs. Nafe. "Since Lorenzo's grew them side horns, I got the agent man to hev 'em put in the picture, too. Cost me ten dollars, them side horns."

When, after another interval, Miss Webster again called at the Nafe residence, although for some time she had not been privileged to meet Lorenzo, she yet felt confident that she understood the situation this time.

"Ah, Mrs. Nafe," she remarked, glancing at the easel, "I have not seen your son since spring, but I know now that he has grown a handsome beard."

"No, he ain't," corrected Mrs. Nafe, smiling fondly at the picture of her boy. "I been a-pestering Lorenzo to grow a beard, like his pa uster wear, but he won't hear to it, Lorenzo won't! I just thought I'd see how he'd look, supposing he had one."

"The agent man done that beard for only eight dollars, but"—sighing—" 'tain't no so long ez his pa uster wear."—Youth's Companion.

Girls in Guatemala.

None of the maidens in Guatemala are allowed to go abroad from their homes without the company of a chaperon, and a lover is only allowed to come and court his sweetheart through the heavily barred windows of her father's home. After they are married they pass along the streets in Indian file, the woman marching ahead, so that the husband can be in a position to prevent any flirtations.

THE STREET-CORNER GIRL.

Her Unconsidered Acts Shut Her Out from Social Advancement.

Horace Wendall, the well-known banker, was on his way to the office of Dr. Richards, the even better-known physician. It was half past 2 in the afternoon—an utterly impossible hour, as he had informed the physician; but Dr. Richards had quietly said it was the only hour at which he could give him treatment, and had added that the walk from the banker's office to his own was part of the treatment; and Mr. Wendall had yielded, as people always did with Dr. Richards.

He walked briskly, to lose as little time as possible, yet even so he smiled sympathetically at a group on the corner of Bellevue avenue—a pretty, bright-faced schoolgirl with two high-school cadets. The girl made him think of Jessica, his own little niece and adopted daughter, who was the apple of his eye.

The next day, half-unconsciously, he looked up as he reached the corner. The pretty schoolgirl was there again, this time with three boys; they had the air of having lingered for some time; and this afternoon Mr. Wendall did not smile.

During the next three weeks there was scarcely a school-day that the girl was not standing upon the corner with one or more boys. Once she reached up and saucily boxed the ears of one of the boys; once, a man, passing, glanced insolently at her. The banker, still thinking of his little Jessica, wondered gravely if the girl had no mother.

It was the next night that Jessica brought home a schoolmate to dinner. She had talked a great deal lately of Carolyn Edson, her brightness, her popularity, her generosity, and Uncle Horace always wanted to meet her friends. As for the girls, they were always delighted with him. But this evening things seemed to go wrong. Uncle Horace was courtesy itself to their guest, but Jessica, knowing him, missed something that she never had missed before.

After Carolyn had gone, Uncle Horace called Jessica to him.

"Little girl," he said, "have I always been nice to your friends?"

"A dear," Jessica answered, promptly. "The girls all adore you so that I'm jealous most of the time."

"Then will you trust a blundering old uncle when he asks you not to see very much of this particular one—because he happens to know that she isn't quite the kind of girl that he wants his little girl to know?"

Jessica was silent a long while; then she said, quietly, "You have the right, Uncle Horace."

That was the way it happened that Carolyn Edson found herself somehow "left out" at the Wendalls. It was harsh judgment, perhaps, but life has a fashion of exacting heavy payment.—Youth's Companion.

Value of "Stooping."

Always be civil. Try to treat rich and poor alike. Is not the poor man's 20 shillings as good as the rich man's pound? The working man's wife, with her basket on her arm, says Sir Thomas Lipton in the Strand, is entitled to as much respect as the lady who comes in her carriage. When Benjamin Franklin was ambassador at the French court, speaking to a young man, he said: "The last time I saw poor father he received me in his study. As I was leaving he showed me a short way out of the house through a narrow passage crossed by a beam overhead. Suddenly he cried: 'Stoop! Stoop!' I did not understand what he meant until I felt my head bump against the beam. He was a man who never failed to give good advice. 'You are going,' he said, 'and have got to go through the world. Stoop as you go through it, and you will miss many hard thumps.' I have never failed to be impressed by this lesson of humility."

A Diplomatic Reply.

An Eastern potentate once asked a group of his courtiers which they thought the greater man, himself or his father. At first he could elicit no reply to so dangerous a question. At last a wily old courtier said, "Your father, sire, for, though you are equal to your father in all other respects, in this he is superior to you, that he had a greater son than any you have." He was promoted on the spot.

Man is of a forgiving disposition, in some ways; one good cantaloupe will cause him to forget a dozen bad ones.

No Swollen Hands for Anty Drudge.

Mrs. Youngwife—"I'm in a peck of trouble. Some friends are coming to dinner to-night to celebrate Tom's birthday, and my hands are so swollen, I am sure they will be noticed."

Anty Drudge—"What caused your hands to swell like that?"

Mrs. Youngwife—"I had two big baskets full of clothes to boil today—baby does get his frocks so awfully dirty."

Anty Drudge—"If my hands were in the condition of yours, I'd be ashamed of them, too. Why I had four big baskets full, and my hands would do credit to a first class manicure. My dear, use Fels-Naptha soap, as directed on the wrapper, and you will never be worried with swollen hands."

If you hired a girl to do the washing, you wouldn't do it yourself while she sat in the parlor, would you? That would be ridiculous.

Then, when you get a cake of Fels-Naptha soap, use it the Fels-Naptha way and let it do the work. If you use Fels-Naptha as you would other soaps, you are like the woman who does the work herself while her hired girl plays the piano.

A woman who uses Fels-Naptha as if it were just soap, instead of a new way of washing, is misguided or foolish.

The directions on the wrapper are plain: Use Fels-Naptha in cold or lukewarm water, with no boiling and no hard rubbing. That's why Fels-Naptha was invented, to do away with boiling and hard rubbing, save fuel, save health, save time and save the clothes. Make Fels-Naptha do your work for you while you play the piano. Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

THE ELIMINATION OF SENOR ZELAYA

This Is What Uncle Sam Is Driving At.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Details of the program mapped out by Secretary of State Knox for punishing President Zelaya of Nicaragua for the summary execution of two Americans, Leonard Grace and Leroy Cannon, have been laid before President Taft, who, it is believed, will approve the program. The measures contemplated by Secretary Knox are said to be of a drastic nature. Orders were sent by the navy department to the transport Buffalo, which is now at Pinchillique bay, Mexico, directing that vessel to proceed as rapidly as possible to Panama, where she will await orders.

While the details of Secretary Knox's plan of action in dealing with Nicaragua are not known, it is regarded as probable by well informed people here that an apology and substantial indemnities for the families of the executed Americans will be demanded from Zelaya. Mr. Knox may also send passports to Senor Rodriguez, the Nicaraguan charge d'affaires here. This action would be a complete severance of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

For many months the state department has desired to eliminate Zelaya from Central American politics. He has not been only obnoxious to the United States and its diplomatic representative in Managua, but has been regarded by the officers of the state department as a political mischief-maker. He has been charged with instigating revolutionary movements against neighboring republics and with violating the agreement of the Central American peace conference held in Washington in 1907. In addition he endeavored to wreck the Central American court of justice at Cartago, Costa Rica, officials asserted, because it rendered a decision against him but was prevented from accomplishing his purpose by the United States and Mexico.

SUSPICION CONFIRMED

It Is Now Declared Victim of Recent Explosion Had Lived a Dual Life.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 22.—The suspicion in the minds of the people of Laporte that a deep mystery was wrapped up in the identity of Harry J. May, vice president of the Laporte Stone Manufacturing company, and inventor of a waterproof cement block, who lost his life on Oct. 20 in an explosion of a secret compound he was mixing, has been confirmed through an inquiry made by Mrs. H. H. Thompson of Jamestown, N. D., for particulars of the explosion. Mrs. Thompson states that the dead man was her husband and that his name was not Harry J. May, but Harry H. Thompson. Mrs. Thompson also says the woman who lived with May in Laporte from March this year until the explosion and posed as his wife, was a woman from Fargo, N. D. The real name of the woman has not been ascertained.

Federal Court Says Property Rights Cannot Be Determined by Injunction.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 22.—Property rights cannot be determined by an injunction, according to an opinion handed down by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran, in the case of Mrs. Maggie A. Richardson against W. E. Richardson and other children of Mrs. Richardson. Judge Cochran holds that an injunction does not lie in this case and refuses the application. The plaintiff asked that the defendants be restrained from selling or conveying any of the real or personal property of the plaintiff, and that they be enjoined from interfering with her personal liberty if she comes back to this state from Cincinnati. The opinion says that the petition does not allege that the property is owned by the plaintiff and that the ownership of property cannot be determined by injunction. The case was from Scott county, and it was in this case that a Lexington lawyer was fined for contempt of court and a sensation resulted from allegations that Mrs. Richardson was being secreted in Cincinnati.

MUCH POWER GIVEN TO COLLECTOR LOEB

Treasury Puts It Up to Him to Yield the Ax.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The collector of customs at the port of New York, William Loeb, Jr., arrived here last night and is holding a conference today with Secretary of Treasury MacVeagh in regard to the inquiry in the sugar fraud cases. "I came here to confer with Secretary MacVeagh," Mr. Loeb said in reply to a question. "It is not true that I was asked to come here to take up the customs frauds with President Taft. During my stay here, however, I shall pay my respects to the president."

Mr. Loeb said that during his talk with Secretary MacVeagh he would acquaint him fully with conditions in the New York customs house. He was extremely reticent on the subject of the frauds. He said he had nothing to give to the public at this time as to whether there would be additional removals from the service in the near future. "I desire to discuss with Secretary MacVeagh certain matters of policy bearing not only on the investigation into alleged collusion of government employees with importers but on the conduct of the office of collector as a general thing," said Mr. Loeb.

The collector expressed great pleasure with the support he said he was receiving from the treasury department in the work of cleaning out the New York customs service. "The department is determined to stick to the job to the finish," said Mr. Loeb. "We will conclude our labors in due season, but it is impossible to say just when we will be able to announce that the service has been cleaned up."

Collector Loeb denied that his visit here was to discuss the advisability of more removals. While the collector did not say so, it is the understanding in official circles that he has been given carte blanche by Secretary MacVeagh in the matter of dismissals and that whoever he marks for the block will lose his official head.

How Cook Lost Out.

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 23.—Governor Haskell thwarted the organization of a new southwestern Oklahoma county to be named in honor of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the north pole explorer, when he refused to call an election for the county's organization on the ground that that would not leave a sufficient taxable acreage in Caddo county. Attorneys friendly to Cook will attempt to mandamus Haskell to call the election.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and break up your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Sold by all druggists.

To Be an Elaborate Affair.

Manila, Nov. 23.—The ceremonies at the inauguration of Governor General Forbes tomorrow will exceed in elaborateness all former functions of this kind. There will be an imposing parade, which will be participated in by the army, the navy and the Philippine constabulary.

If you desire a clear complexion take Foley's Orino Laxative for constipation and liver trouble as it will stimulate these organs and thoroughly cleanse your system, which is what every one needs in order to feel well. Sold by all druggists.

Big Blaze in Drygoods.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 23.—Bernard Frank & Co.'s wholesale drygoods store was completely wrecked by fire last night. The loss will not be less than $250,000.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs quickly, strengthens the lungs and expels colds. Get the genuine in a yellow package. Sold by all druggists.

KEPT HIM COOLING HIS HEELS IN VAIN

Nicaraguan Representative's
Welcome Wears Thin.

Colon, Nov. 23.—Passengers arriving from Nicaraguan ports say that a number of Americans who were in business in Nicaragua are missing and declare they are languishing in jail.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Charge d'Affaires Felipe Rodriguez of Nicaragua, has learned that he is not as welcome at the state department as before the recent diplomatic crisis between Nicaragua and the United States. There was no studied attempt to snub the diplomatic visitor, but he was kept waiting in the diplomatic room until he tired and left.

Senor Rodriguez made no attempt to call on Secretary Knox. He arrived at the department and informed a messenger that he wished to see Second Assistant Secretary Ade. He was ushered into the diplomatic reception room, where he waited for about twenty minutes. Finally he asked one of the department messengers if Mr. Ade was busy. The reply was that the assistant secretary was busy at the moment, but the messenger assured him that Mr. Ade would see him soon. Senor Rodriguez, however, would not wait, and departed somewhat hastily. He declined to discuss the trouble.

It would not be surprising if Secretary Knox should send passports to Senor Rodriguez, thus working a complete severance of diplomatic relations, as the United States has not had a diplomatic representative at Managua for several months. President Taft has approved Secretary Knox's plan for demanding full reparation from President Zelaya. The president, it is understood, is leaving the matter in the hands of his secretary of state.

No information was given out as to the "certain facts" upon which further corroboration is desired before taking action. It was said, however, that the inquiries to obtain the verification of the "certain facts" would cause no delay. Secretary Knox will immediately take all steps necessary to protect the lives and property of American citizens in Nicaragua. It is likely that his plan to punish Zelaya contemplates an apology and an indemnity for the summary execution of the two Americans, Cannon and Grace, who were executed after having confessed to laying mines in the San Juan river to blow up government troopships. If Zelaya has not made complete amends before congress meets two weeks hence, the question of punitive measures may be laid before the legislative branch of the government.

PUT OUT OF BUSINESS

Fraud Order Issued Against an Alleged Fake Jewelry House.

Washington, Nov. 23.—As a result of a complaint made to the postoffice department by the British ambassador and others and a subsequent investigation, Postmaster General Hitchcock has signed a fraud order depriving the Erie Manufacturing company of 5645 West Lake street, Chicago, from further use of the mails. Under this name, the department says, E. F. Hansell has been engaged in a scheme for obtaining money through the mails by means of false and fraudulent pretenses in disposing of a line of cheap jewelry. For some time complaints have been received at the postoffice department from persons who had fallen into the clutches of Hansell by remitting money and who were thereby annoyed by receipts of dunning and threatening letters intimating that they were withholding the money to defraud the Erie company. Among the recent complaints was one from Ambassador Bryce, stating in his communication, which was transmitted through the state department, that an English lad at school in New Jersey had received unsolicited a package of this alleged jewelry and had at once returned it to the Erie company. Nevertheless the lad continued to receive threatening duns, until finally in boyish desperation, he attempted suicide and by the merest chance he was prevented from accomplishing it.

The inspectors found that the "jewelry" sold by Hansell is manufactured in Providence, R. I., and costs him $1 for 144 pieces. The postmaster at Chicago reported that the Erie Manufacturing company received on an average of 1,284 pieces of mail a day.

Disbarment Trial in Progress.

Indianapolis, Nov. 23.—The selection of a jury has begun in superior court No. 1 in the suit of the Indianapolis Bar association for the disbarment of J. S. Rutherford, who is charged with subornation of perjury in three instances. Rutherford denies the charges against him. The accused attorney is now under indictment in criminal court charged with subornation of perjury.

A FEW STROKES OF PEN DID IT

Taft Dispenses With Ready
Letter Writer.

HARD BLOW TO UNCLE DUDLEY

In a Sharp Letter to William Dudley Foulke, Who Had Acquired the Ready Letter Writing Habit During the Late Administration, President Taft Tells Indiana Reformer Where to Get Off—Washington Statesmen Chortling Over a Situation That Is Not Without an Element of Humor.

Washington, Nov. 23.—That he can get along without another of the Roosevelt institutions, the ready letter writer, President Taft has practically announced. He has written a sharp letter to William Dudley Foulke of Richmond, Ind., erstwhile a civil service commissioner and member of the Roosevelt kitchen cabinet, telling Mr. Foulke in the political vernacular of Indiana, "where to get off."

It appears that Mr. Foulke contracted the habit of writing occasionally to President Roosevelt on questions of national importance and of getting long replies which were promptly given to the press. There were many observers of the Roosevelt "policies" who believed that Mr. Foulke was a convenience for President Roosevelt, and to such persons Mr. Foulke became known to fame as the "ready letter writer."

The habit seems to have clung to the Indiana reformer. In any event, when President Taft returned from his western trip he found in his bulky correspondence a letter from William Dudley Foulke administering to the president a lot of chastisement on account of Mr. Taft's Winona speech. Mr. Foulke voiced his disappointment at the tone of the speech and mildly rebuked the president and conveyed, with expressions of profound regret, the feelings of disappointment which filled his breast and surged in the bosoms of other reformers because the president had seen fit to part company with the so-called insurgents. Mr. Foulke took occasion to remind the president that he had been one of Mr. Taft's apte-convention supporters and that, he declared, made his grief all the more poignant.

President Taft replied to the letter of Mr. Foulke. The correspondence is not available at this time, but a few visiting statesmen at the White House have been permitted to read Mr. Foulke's letter and the president's reply. They are chortling over it, and it is believed the president did not overlook the humor in the situation when he dispensed with the services of the "ready letter writer" by a few strokes of his pen.

FRESH CLERK GETS HIS

Justice Holdom Renders an Interesting
Decision at Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Calling his employer's wife "honey dear," women employes "honey" and a customer "gille" was sufficient cause for the dismissal of Ralph Alexander and nullified his right to sue for unearned wages afterward, according to a decision given here by the appellate court. The opinion was written by the presiding justice, Jesse Holdom.

Alexander sued for and recovered $219.50 from Jack Potts, wholesale milliner. The reviewing judge analyzed the conduct of the employee and then reversed the judgment of the lower court. "That plaintiff's conduct was unseemly, he tacitly admits," the opinion reads. "It is plain that his conduct was subversive of discipline among the other employes, and detrimental and hurtful to defendant's business."

A Child and a Gun.

Huntington, Ind., Nov. 23.—Ethel Patton, aged thirteen years, was shot and fatally wounded by her sister Grace, aged nine years. The bullet of a 22-caliber rifle entered the girl's neck and severed the spinal cord. Grace pointed the gun at her older sister, saying playfully that she would shoot. The gun was loaded and the trigger pulled back so that the weapon was discharged the instant the finger touched it.

Taken Back to Ohio.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 23.—Clyde D. Simpson, aged twenty-six, formerly of Anderson, for two years a telegraph operator at the Duane yards of the Big Four road, was arrested and after confessing that he was one of two men who had a revolver battle when trying to hold up the North Manchester (O.) National bank on Oct. 19, waived extradition papers and was taken back to the scene of his crime.

Oil Drillers Bore Into Colliery.

Sullivan, Ind., Nov. 23.—Sullivan prospectors in drilling for oil near the Steel Tipton mine, just south of Shelby, bored into the mine, to the great surprise of the well diggers. The drill had reached a depth of 800 feet when it penetrated a vacant room at the colliery. The miners quickly came up out of the pit, but returned when they found there was no danger.

Lenoir, N. C.—"I am not tired at all, and am stouter than I have ever been," writes Mrs. Kate Waters, of Lenoir, N. C., "although I have just finished a two weeks' wash. I lay my strength to Cardui, the woman's tonic. I have taken a lot of it and I can never praise it enough for what it has done for me. I can never thank you enough for the advice you gave me, to take Cardui, for since taking it I look so well and am stout as a mule."

You are urged to take Cardui, that gentle, vegetable tonic, for weak women. Its use will strengthen and build up your system, relieve or prevent headache, backache and the ailments of weak women.

It will surely help you, as it has helped thousands of others, in the past 50 years.

PRIVATE SMUGGLERS ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT

"Sleeper Trunks" System to Be Looked Into.

Washington, Nov. 23.—In stopping the frauds against the customs revenues, the government intends to go the limit, according to Secretary MacVeagh. What has been done at the New York custom house is only a beginning. Methods at custom houses at other ports will undergo a searching inquiry.

Secretary MacVeagh said that the frauds against the customs service through the smuggling of "sleeper trunks" would amount to more than $1,000,000 at New York alone. Under the "sleeper trunks" system baggage arriving on an ocean liner at New York is carried over to the dock of a steamer which had departed a short time previously. Then somebody in the game comes to the dock of the steamer which has gone, and after expressing annoyance over missing the vessel, gets permission from unsuspecting customs officers to take the baggage away.

Secretary MacVeagh said that the federal authorities were fully aware that it would be necessary to hasten matters in order to obtain the indictment of some of the guilty before the intervention of the statute of limitations, and that Attorney General Wickersham and United States Attorney Wise were watching this closely with a view to keeping the cases alive. The secretary said that the government would take the necessary steps to recover every dollar found to have been lost to the treasury through customs frauds.

Stone Workers.

Twenty-four men from New York and other eastern cities, were in Seymour Monday on their way to Bedford, where they will be employed in the stone quarries. A number of men recently left the quarries on a strike, and it is believed these men have come from the east to take the places of the strikers. It is said a party of stone workers from Bedford met the eastern men here, and tried to prevail upon them not to go to the quarries, but the men left for Bedford yesterday morning on a special train.

HOW CAN SHE DRESS ON $15,000 A YEAR?

Giulia Morosini, Best Gowned New Yorker, Said to Be in Dilemma Over Estate Shrinkage.

SHE HAS NOW ONLY $1,633,427

Society Fears She'll Have to Cut $30,000 Wardrobe Allowance in Two to Keep Wolf Away.

"How on earth will New York's best dressed woman maintain her wardrobe on $15,000 a year?" This was the question New York society asked when it heard that Miss Giulia Morosini would have to cut in two her annual allowance of $30,000 for dress because her father's estate had been found to be only $2,660,509, instead of more than $7,000,000, as supposed before the Surrogate court's records.

Miss Giulia was the favorite daughter of Giovanni P. Morosini, banker, who left her the greater part of his wealth. Her inheritance is placed at $1,633,427, the interest on which at 4 per cent would be only $65,000 a year. To maintain the Morosini home in its accustomed style will cost, it is said, $50,000 a year, leaving only $15,000 for the heiress' clothing account.

The young woman has been criticized for spending so much money on her wardrobe, but she always defends her course on the ground her expenditures helped many classes.

"I believe in making myself as attractive through dress as I can. It is every woman's duty if not her pleasure. I consider good taste in dress a matter of science."

"Clothes draw on all of the works of nature for support. It is really wonderful to consider. From the depths of the earth we gather our jewels to adorn, from the forest and field we get our fabric and color and from the very

FIRST STEAMBOAT IN THE WORLD.

THE CLEREMONT.

The first steamboat in the world, the Cleremont, invented and made by Robert Fulton a hundred years ago, and then put into commission on the Hudson river, was reproduced to be used in the great Hudson-Fulton celebration recently held in New York. Little did the wondering, fun-poking people of that period dream of the honors that would be paid to Fulton a hundred years hence. They are now all forgotten, but the memory of Fulton still remains green. This celebration was the greatest in which the people of New York and the surrounding country have participated in since the days of Fulton. If Fulton could only come back to see what has transpired in Uncle Sam's vineyard, and on the world's waterways, since he went away he would be more astonished over other big things that have come to pass than he would be over the great steamboats that have followed the Cleremont—for he told the people when they were laughing at him that the Cleremont was only the beginning.

respect for man her faith in God may not be lost, but it changes in character. God's decrees as they have been transmitted to her by man then become open to question, and she begins to substitute her own interpretations. Except in degenerate people there can be no such thing as "sex antagonism." Men have always frankly despised women without in the least disliking them. One woman here and there a man may respect, but toward women in general his attitude will remain for the most part kindly contemptuous.

Nowadays the attitude of woman toward men is very much the same, says Sarah Grand in the London Chronicle, but in their contempt there is more bitterness and less tolerance, and the effect upon themselves of the loss of respect for men is altogether different. It has been the habit of their minds to look up to men and to rely upon them, character and point of view. Taking the attainment of happiness as the one thing worth living for—she scoffs at men for their failure to make the world a pleasant place to live in, for their Chinese conservatism, their lack of enterprise in social reform, their hypocrisy, their stick-in-the-mud unprogressive tendencies generally.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURED.

When They Work for Wages Precautionary Measures Begin.

The insurance has become in less than thirty years part of the warp of German life, Madge Jennings says in Harper's Magazine. It affects the life of the masses like common school education with endless meaning and issue. Twelve million people have sickness insurance; 14,000,000 are insured against invalidism and old age; 19,000,000 against accident. When a boy begins his apprenticeship at 16 he begins his insurance. Even children under age who work for wages out of school hours are required to insure for invalidism and old age. The men in labor colonies must be insured, and prisoners hired out by the state. In every factory one meets it; in every tenement. It has been estimated that, counting with the insured their families, who are also protected by the insurance, one-half the population of the empire is reached by this vast imperial backing of peace.

Germany is developing very fast industrially. The average wage of a laborer was 30 cents a day twenty years ago; it is now 60 or 75 cents, and the cost of living has risen correspondingly—in reality far more. Sickness pensions are reckoned in general at one-half the wages of the class of labor under consideration, and the pension in the lowest class is thus set under the present law at 15 cents a day—an income upon which to live in any industrial town in modern Germany, however small, is only words, words, words. One could laugh sometimes at the involutions of this vast official comedy; one could laugh if that were not so near which chills laughter. The acts are promptly and surely executed when a pensioner's claim is established, but the official supposition in Germany is always that you are wrong; you must prove that you are right; innumerable precautions are taken to guard against the practice of fraud; a sick man may spend months completing the formalities of his claim.

Ants Will Eat Boll Weevil.

The Federal government will experiment in cotton fields near Durant, Okla., with black ants to exterminate boll weevil, the most damaging of cotton pests, says the St. Louis Globe Democrat. The discovery was recently made by Special Agent S. W. Murphy, of the Department of Agriculture, who is located in Durant, that the ants will devour the young weevil. The discovery was made entirely by accident in the following manner:

Murphy had visited a cotton patch near Durant and secured several weevils which were about to hatch. They were taken to his office for observation under a magnifying glass to determine what effect, if any, the recent hot weather had had upon them. They were placed upon a newspaper and left upon a table while Murphy went to dinner.

When he returned scores of little black ants were devouring the weevil. He wrote a full report of his discovery to Dr. Knapp, head of the Bureau of Plant Life Industry, under whose direction Murphy is now working. Murphy is confident that he has found in them an insect which will destroy the boll weevil without injuring the crop, and he intends to colonize as many ants as possible in a cotton field near Durant next year, and to assist him in his efforts he has asked that a government expert be detailed.

INTERNATIONAL CONTROVERSY OVER NIAGARA FALLS SUICIDES

argument, but declare that without some justification from Congress they have not the power to spend the money of the nation in this fashion, and insist that the bodies ought to be buried wherever the yare found.

As a result of the argument a greater effort is being made to watch closely those who make the visit to the falls. It has long been one of the charms of the manner in which the two nations have guarded Niagara that it is possible to get to the very edge of the falls, and standing within three or four feet of the edge to marvel at the onrushing floods as they take their descent for the 200-foot jump to the gully below.

Although it may possess the suicide mania for a small percentage of unfortunate, to the great majority Niagara is lulling, it gives comfort, it is a temporary surcease from troubles that seem small when brought into the presence of this wonderful work of nature. To put the average visitor farther away from the points where

The unaccountable allurements which the rushing waters of Niagara Falls hold for persons having suicidal inclinations, has raised a controversy between the United States and Canada. Enough of these suicides take place every year to make the matter one that needs to be dealt with. A large number of those taking their own lives are identified by clothing or by letters, but the plunge is so great, the rocks so numerous and the churning, obliterating effect of the countless tons of water in motion at terrific speed so great, that in most cases it is very difficult to assure a true identification.

It is a somewhat curious fact that the bodies of those who have performed the act of combined bravery and cowardice follow a sort of beaten track. When the authorities learn of a suicide they first go to the landing where the little boat, the Maid of the Mist, comes in and goes out on its trips, and in almost every case the battered, swollen body will be found there. Those which do not stop then go on through the rapids and bring up further down the stream in the vortex of the whirlpool.

Both of these points, the Maid of the Mist landing and the whirlpool, are on the Canadian side. Hence the Queen Victoria Park commission, which controls the river front all the way from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, has been in the habit of bringing these melancholy derelicts to the top of the bank at an expense to itself of $60 or $70 apiece and of interring them separately in Fairview Cemetery in a site that has been set apart for such cases.

The Canadian officials have addressed a request to the American park commissioners to pay at least a proportionate share of the expense. There is one very good argument advanced in favor of this position. Most of the suicides take the plunge on the American side. It is only the action of the current that carries to the shores of the Dominion the legacy of death.

The American park commissioners concede the justice of the Canadian he can get the best view would be a hardship.

Uncle Sam and the Dominion of Canada dwell too happily as neighbors to have any serious row over the question. But it must be settled, for as long as Niagara's roar attracts and its dancing waters appeal, there will be suicides to dispose of.

question remains. What produced the sudden increase of barometric pressure?

At Koutchino, near Moscow, Russia possesses the most complete laboratory for researches pertaining to aviation now in existence. The work is under the direction of Mr. Riabouchinsky, and the money was furnished by a wealthy Muscovite. It has become the center of much interest since the recent achievements in aerial navigation. Here investigations are made of all questions relating to aerodynamics, and some remarkable results have been obtained, especially in regard to what is called the "autorotation" of bodies of certain shapes when placed in currents of air. It has already been made evident that there are many phenomena of an unexpected character which, when they have been thoroughly investigated, may materially aid inventors and engineers in the construction of more effective flying machines.

WHY WOMEN REVOLT TO-DAY.

Well Known Writer Says "Weaker" Sex Has Begun to Think.

At present thoughtful women are going through a period of profound disenchantment; but disenchantment in their case is no check upon mental activity. A normal woman's faith in God is more largely based on respect for man than she suspects; when she loses and when they can do neither they suffer a disastrous change of nature. Men's ideals are unaffected by the profound conviction that woman is the inferior animal, but when women see only the inferior animal in man, it acts upon them as the loss of faith acts upon certain temperaments. It destroys their sense of duty, cuts them adrift from old ideals without setting up new ones, deprives them of all feeling of security, and leaves a yearning ache craving for some sort of satisfaction, and, finding none in the pursuits once dear, but now considered ineffectual for any good, and therefore not worth while, drives them to reckless extravagances of thought and conduct.

From of old there have been opinions of men afloat among women the reverse of flattering, but not of men in general, only of odd specimens, and never expressed above a whisper. The woman of to-day judges men in the mass, and does not whisper. She jeers at them aloud, or laughs, or mourns for the pity of it, according to her

THE LITTLE SPARROW.

I am only a tiny sparrow.
A bird of low degree;
My life is of little value,
But the dear Lord cares for me.

I have no barn or storehouse,
I neither sow nor reap;
God gives me a sparrow's portion,
But never a seed to keep.

If my meal is sometimes scanty,
Close picking makes it sweet;
I have always enough to feed me,
And life is more than meat.

I know there are many sparrows,
All over the world they are found;
But our heavenly Father knoweth
When one of us falls to the ground.

Though small, we are never forgotten;
Though weak, we are never afraid;
For we know the dear Lord keepeth
The life of the creatures he made.

I fly to the thickest forest,
I light on many a spray;
I have no chart nor compass,
But I never lose my way.

And I fold my wings at twilight,
Wherever I happen to be;
For the Father is always watching,
And no harm will come to me.

Sunbeam Conquered A Giant

By JOHN S. REMY.

Agos ago there lived in a province in India the most powerful giant the world has ever known. Not only was he stronger than ten other giants together, but there was nothing in the world he could not do. He wandered up and down the land, commanding people to give him tasks to perform, and he had never failed, no matter how difficult was the thing asked, to at once accomplish it. He was a harsh and cruel giant, for, as soon as he had done a person's bidding, he immediately carried that person off to his great palace in the mountains, where he was held a prisoner.

At last the ruler of this province said he would give up his throne to anyone who could ask this giant something he would fail to do. All the wise and great men of the kingdom racked their brains to think of some impossible task, and many curious things were asked of the giant. For instance, it was in the middle of the winter season, when no fruit, not even buds, were on the trees, and a great land-owner came to the giant, and said, "Make my hundreds of trees at once full of ripe and luscious fruits." Hardly had the words left his mouth when a flash of color ran over the trees, and buds and blossoms burst into beauty, and then the branches were bending under their load of fruit; and off went the wealthy land-owner to the giant's castle.

Then came a great physician. "I need," said he, "many herbs and drugs that India does not produce. Get them for me at once,—one of every herb that grows in every land in the world, or you shall drink a drug that will put an end to your wicked power."

"Ah! ha!" chuckled the giant. "You are just the man I need in my castle. There are two many slaves there. You shall take your drugs with you, and make a deadly drink for the lazy ones."

At once the physician was almost buried beneath the herbs and drugs that he had ordered, and he, too, went off to the castle.

The ruler of the kingdom now came to the giant. He was a kind and tender-hearted man, and a wise one also; and he thought to himself, "Well, this may be my last day in my kingdom, so I'll ask the giant something which, if he can do it, will at least leave my people comfortable, and happy after I am gone."

So he said to the giant: "For once you shall use this magic power of yours for good, or else leave this land forever. There are many poor, many sick people in my country. If you can make every one wealthy, healthy, and happy, I shall be quite content to go to your castle, and be your slave forever."

The giant hated to do a kindly deed, so he roared with rage, and said to the ruler: "For this you shall work in the mines of my rock-bound home. You shall never again see a ray of sunlight or know any other pleasure in life. Solitary work in the darkest corners of the gold mines shall be your portion."

"After you have made all my subjects wealthy and healthy," taunted the brave ruler. Of course, the giant had to grant his wish in order to get him in his power. And, as the prince was taken from his palace by the giant, and fairly dragged along the streets, crowds of healthy, happy people thronged the way, and cried, "We will come for you, Your Royal Mightiness; you shall not long remain in the giant's power!"

The vast army of people went to the very edge of the giant's land with their ruler; but here a sheer wall of rock, thousands of feet high, stopped them, while the magic powers of the giant wafted him and his royal prisoner right over the wall and into the giant's castle. The giant only stayed long enough to set the ruler at work in the dark mines, and then he rushed off to the kingdom to secure more victims. The first person he saw was a gentle little maiden. She was seated before an open window, working on a wonderful piece of embroidery, in which, among soft hues of rainbow silk, flashed and gleamed gorgeous jewels and bands of gleaming gold.

"Ah! I need such a worker as this in my castle," thought the grim old giant; and he stopped before the open window.

His great black shadow fell on the beautiful embroidery, darkened the radiant colors, and caused the young girl to look up. Now she was pretty well frightened when she saw this great giant before her; but she was both brave and quick-witted, and as she saw how dim her gold and jewels looked, now that the brilliant sunlight was shut off from them, a thought popped right into her pretty head.

"Oh, good-morning, you big, brave giant," she cried. "I was just wishing for your help in this piece of embroidery I am doing for the royal palace. Now that you have made us all rich, I can buy all the gold and jewels that I wish. But I need one thing more. Will you get it for me?"

"Yes, and take the embroidery and the pretty worker both to my castle," said the giant, in a tone he tried to make pleasant.

"Oh, you dear, kind giant!" said the maid, with a merry laugh. "I want a few, just a very few of those beams, dancing on the grass behind you, to weave in my work. Then it will be perfect to"—and she made a little pause, for she knew that the giant could never capture a sunbeam,—to, she went on mockingly, "welcome back our brave, good ruler!"

The giant was beside himself with rage, for he knew that the little maid had asked the one impossible thing.

His punishment for his wicked life came so suddenly that he had not even time to answer her. At one and the same instant he was transported to an island in the midst of the sea, from which he could never return; while the rocky walls of his kingdom fell to the ground, and all the prisoners there came back to their homes to find their wealth and happiness.

As the ruler entered the city, a great crowd met him, and took him to the pretty embroiderer.

"Here, Your Majesty, is the maid who has saved your kingdom!" they cried. The royal ruler took his jeweled crown from his head, and placed it on the head of the young girl, saying, "I greet thee, Queen of my kingdom!"

"No, Your Majesty," answered the maid. "I should feel but sorrow if I had driven the giant from your kingdom only to force you from your throne."

"Then share my throne with me," said the ruler, who had fallen in love with her sweet face and pretty manners. "Come help me with your wisdom and kind heart to rule my kingdom."

This the little embroiderer consented to do; and the wonderful embroidery, in which not only sunbeams, but moonbeams, and all the tints of sunset and sunrise, seemed to flash and mingle in rare beauty, became the wedding gown of the fairest and wisest queen that had ever been known in that land—Christian Register.

MOTHER BEES, NOT QUEENS.

A Bee Master Says the Queen Is the One Real Subject.

"There are no queens, properly so called, in bee life," said the bee master of Pleasantville, N. J. "There are hundreds of hives in my garden, and there isn't a queen in any of them."

"If you keep a fairly close watch on the progress of any particular hive, it is very easy to see how the old false idea got into general use. At first glance a bee colony looks very much like a kingdom, and the single large bee that all the others pay court to and attend so carefully seems very like a queen."

"The mother bee seems, on the face of it, a miracle of intelligence and foresight. While as far as you know all other creatures in the world bring forth their young of both sexes haphazard, this can lay male or female eggs apparently at will. You watch her going from comb to comb, and the eggs she drops in the small cells hatch out females and those she puts in the larger cells are always males or drones."

"More than that, she seems always to know the exact condition of the hive and to be able to limit her egg laying according to its need or otherwise of population; for either you see her filling only a few cells each day in a little patch of comb that can be covered with the palm of your hand or she goes to work on a gigantic scale and in twenty-four hours produces eggs that weigh more than twice as much as her whole body."

"Then," he goes on in Van Norden's Magazine, "to cap all, as the honey season draws on to its height you are forced to think that the queen has conceived and is carrying through a scheme for the good of her subjects that would do credit to the wisest ruler ever born in human purple."

"Every day of summer sunshine has brought thousands of young bees into life. The hive is getting overcrowded. Sooner or later one of two things must happen—either the increase of population must be checked or a great party must be formed to leave the old home and go out to establish another.

"Then it is that the mother bee seems to prove beyond a doubt her wisdom and queenliness. She decides for the emigration, but as a leader must be found for the party and none is at hand she forms the resolve to lead it herself."

"A new ruler for the old realm must be provided to take her place when she has gone forever, and now you see a party of bees set to work on something that fairly beggars your curiosity."

"At first it looks exactly like an acorn cup in wax hanging from the under edge of the comb. Perhaps the next time you look the cup has grown to twice its original size and now you see it is half full of a glistening white jelly."

"The next time, maybe, you open the hive the acorn has been added to the cup, the queen cell is sealed over and finished, and about a week later there comes out a full grown queen bee twice the size of the ordinary worker and quite different in shape and often different in color."

"If the mother bee really brought all this about queen would not be good enough name for her, but the truth is throughout all the wonder workings of the hive the queen is little more than an instrument, a kind of an automaton, merely doing what the workers compel her to do."

"They are the real queens in the hive and the mother bee is the one and only subject. The birth of a queen is simply a question of where the eggs are laid."

"Thousands and thousands of worker eggs are laid in a hive during the season, and each of those could be made into a queen if the workers chose; but the worker egg is laid in a small cell and the larva is bred on a bare minimum of food at the least possible cost in time, trouble and space to the hive, while when a new queen is wanted a cell as big as your finger tip is built and the larva is stuffed like a prize pig through all its five days of active life, until, with unlimited food and time and room to grow in, it comes out at last a perfect mother bee."

Typewritten News.

The typewritten news sheet that has had to be issued in Stockholm because of the general strike to take the place of the regular printed newspaper suggests a quaint echo from the earliest days of English journalism. It was in 1695 that Ichabod Dawks, a "London correspondent" of the original sort, hit upon the idea of issuing his news letter printed in type to imitate writing, the first number being thus announced: "This letter will be done upon good writing paper, and blank space left, that any gentleman may write his own private business. It does undoubtedly exceed the best of the written news, contains double the quantity, is read with abundance more ease and pleasure, and will be useful to improve the younger sort in writing a curious hand." Dawks proudly held in after years that he thus enabled his readers to know "the Occurrences of the Day, and the Heads of the Foreign Affairs, which come in many times after the Publication of the Printed Papers, so that they may have the chiefest news stirring."

The Expense of Being Careless.

A prominent business man, according to Orison Sweet Marden, in Success Magazine, says that the carelessness, inaccuracy, and blundering of employees cost Chicago one million dollars a day. The manager of a large Chicago house says that he has to station pickets here and there through the establishment in order to neutralize the evils of inaccuracies and the blundering habit. Blunders and inaccuracies cost a New York concern twenty-five thousand dollars a year.

Many an employee who would be shocked at the thought of telling his employer a lie with his lips is lying every day in the quality of his work, in his dishonest service, in the rotten hours he is slipping into it, in shirking, in his indifference to his employer's interests. It is just as dishonest to express it with the lips, yet I have known office boys, who could not be induced to tell their employer a direct lie, to steal his time when on an errand, to hide away during working hours to smoke a cigarette or take a nap, not realizing, perhaps, that lies can be acted as well as told, and that acting a lie may be even worse than telling one.

Germany's Squadron.

The squadron which Germany sent to the Hudson-Fulton Celebration consisted of Germany's latest armored cruiser, the 11,600-ton 22.5-knot "Gneisenau"; the protected cruisers "Herta" and "Victoria Louise" of 5,660 tons and 19 knots speed; the "Bremen," 3,250 tons and 23.3 knots, and the "Dresden," one of the new 3,600-ton fast scouts of which Germany is building so many, of 24.5 knots speed.—Scientific American.

Civil War Stories

Personal Experience.

I was a private in Colonel E. Mosby's command, and early earned the title of a "hard case." How I got that undesirable, and in my case undeserved character, I will tell you.

In May, 1864, we were lying at Upperville, Va., and I started for Charlottesville to see my girl. I found that town full of Yankees. Being well mounted, I resolved not to be captured. Such a race as ensued. I started for Smithfield with a whole brigade of Yankees in chase. In a couple of miles Lieutenant Stone joined me, and in a couple of miles more two other graycoats, the younger of these being married but one hour before he had to fly. They pressed us so hard that we had to take to the woods. Soon after we encountered a deep ravine at full speed. I shut my eyes, felt my horse spring and sail through the air, and land on the other side. At least fifty horses and riders piled up in that ravine, my companions with the rest. I rode easy, resting my horse until I arrived at Goosetown, when I heard the Yanks yell within two hundred yards. What a horrace we had with them for a couple of miles. The greater part of the Yanks stopped in Goosetown, but two following. In a few moments I saw General Early's train moving from Winchester to Gordon's Springs.

Now I concluded to capture my Yankee pursuers, so ran my horse behind a blacksmith shop and waited. In a moment they dashed by and I after them. I cannot explain nor understand how, but in some way I got mixed after the Yanks got to the train, and ordered the wrong trooper to surrender, and he in turn called a guard and captured me. He had on the blue, hence my mistake. Well, I told them my story, confident of immediate release, when to my surprise I was informed that none of my cursed Yankee tricks would go down. Talk avoided me—not I was held a prisoner.

After a little General Early sent, at my request, for General Rhodes, and I was released. Meanwhile, I had learned that in losing my Yankee I had taken after Major General Har-nen.

General Rhodes and I started out together. On the way I told him about my race. He told me I was certainly mistaken about the Yanks being at Goosetown, as his pickets were on that road and, to convince me, he, his brother and I rode back. Goosetown is in a basin-like valley, and we let the General ride ahead as we approached the top of the hill. No sooner was he at the hill top than a shower of lead greeted him. There was a regiment camped there.

The General decided at once to attack them from front and rear. He went for his men, but all but four hundred of the Yankees got away before the surround could be made.

I, being one of Mosby's men, owned whatever plunder was captured by me, which was forty-six horses, saddles, and equipments. I had to get two of the prisoners to help me with my captures.

When I arrived at Mosby's camp I found my regiment all ready for a move after a wagon train. I was informed that I must take my prisoners to Winchester and turn them over. This I could not do and go with my regiment. It soon came dark. I told my prisoners that the best thing for them to do was to take a couple of halbers, go over where General Imboden's horses were in pasture, get two good ones, and git. We shook hands, and they did so.

When I rejoined my regiment the boys asked, "What did you do with your prisoners?" "Oh, I left them out in the woods," was my response. They believed that I had killed them, and so believe yet.

Could they have witnessed the reception which those same boys gave me June 5, 1865, in New York City, they would have thought differently. And that, Mr. Editor, is how I came by my hard name.

Masonry in the Civil War.

E. E. Williams of Kirkwood, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis, related to friends in the Masonic order in Washington, a remarkable story of the Civil War which demonstrates how seriously Masonry was regarded in those days.

"I have just been on a visit to my father, L. J. Williams, whose home is in Harvard, N. Y.," he said. "My father served in the Civil War as a member of the One Hundred and Fourteenth New York volunteers. He is a member of the Downsville blue lodge, No. 464."

"When the war broke out the Entered Apprentice and Fellowcraft degrees had been conferred on him in New York. He went out in the defense of his country, without having been raised to the degree of a Master Mason. It was his misfortune to be taken a prisoner of war while at or near Savannah. While he lay in the Southern prison he communicated with some of his friends in the North. His lodge in New York, through the proper officials, got in touch with Zerubbabel Lodge in Savannah, and made the request that the Savannah lodge, as a favor to the brethren of the North, confer the third degree on Fellowcraft brother, L. J. Williams."

"One night my father was taken from his prison and conducted to the Savannah lodgeroom. It was a remarkable occasion. He wore his drab blue uniform, token of his sympathy with the cause of the North. He was surrounded by men who wore the gray. All the chairs were occupied by Confederate officers. They were on opposite sides in a struggle to the death, but they were brethren. Then and there he was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason and acclaimed a friend and brother by his enemies.

"But the more significant feature of the story was yet to follow. For on the same night my father escaped from his prison and rejoined his comrades of the North. I have visited Savannah since then and I looked up the records of his raising. In red ink, on the same page that records the fact that the degree was there conferred, is the brief annotation: 'On this night Brother Williams escaped from prison.'"

"I have talked with my father about the matter a number of times. When asked about his 'escape' he always smiles peculiarly. 'You may put it down as an escape,' he told me, 'but it wasn't an escape, strictly speaking. For on that night some men came to my prison. They put me in a boat and carried me off some distance. Then they deposited me on neutral soil between the lines. From there I found my way back to my friends. Who my rescuers were I have never learned. It is their own secret and it has never been disclosed. But in my own mind I know exactly to whom I may attribute the 'escape' in question. His name is Hiram.'"

The narrator of the story is a member of Kirkwood blue lodge, 484. He has also taken the Royal Arch and the Scottish Rite degrees.

Love in the Hospital.

Here is a true story of love. It has none of the vapid romance of the sea side, nor the sprightliness of the ball room, but it shows and evidences that the human heart is susceptible to love under the most adverse conditions. Indeed, we are not sure but love—true love—is a plant of more tender and healthful growth when removed from all selfish and narrowing surroundings.

At the beginning of the war most of the Southern troops were sent to Virginia. Among other regiments the Fifth Alabama, under Colonel R. E. Rhodes, who was afterward promoted to major general, moved from Montgomery to Richmond, and afterward to Manassas Junction, near Bull Run. After remaining there a short time a member of Company D, Fifth Alabama, was taken sick with camp fever and sent to the hospital at Culpeper Court House. The hospital was in charge of a lady from Hale County, Alabama, by the name of Miss Sally Anne Swope, a noble-hearted woman, but a perfect fire-eater toward the Yankee soldiers. She would nurse a sick or wounded soldier either Yankee or rebel, as well as if he was one of her own family, and at the same time if he were a Yankee she would tell him that she could cut off his head when he was well. After the young man came to the hospital, he continued to grow worse, and at times would be entirely delirious. I was sick at the same time, and noticed a bright, pretty young woman, whose name I will not mention for fear it will recall sad memories to her dear friends and relatives, and whom they will remember with pride for the many noble traits of character she possessed. She would sit by the gallant soldier, during his moments of delirium, for hours, and bathe his brow with her soft, pretty hands and soothe his restless spirit with cheering words. At times the soldier would catch her hand and talk of the dear ones at home, thinking it was his loved sister. Again he would tell her how he loved her—whispering words of love. It became well known by all the friends at the hospital that it was a case of true love. Although it was a labor of love and mercy that made the lady a nurse, yet she never neglected her many patients. At the same time her lover, who was much sicker than any other, received all of her spare time. But the poor fellow continued to grow worse from day to day. The poor girl watched with intense sorrow and affection his sunken features, sweetening the long hours of watching with such loving looks and expressions as could not be mistaken. At last the end came. The dear creature who had watched his bed seemed to have wasted to a mere shadow. The doctors advised rest; but no, she continued to hover around the other patients like one in a dream, providing for their every want. Alas! her heart was broken, and in a short time she too was laid in the grave, having contracted the fever from her lover.

Armed with a Saber Hilt.

When William L. Royall of Fauquier County, Virginia, was 17 years old, he became a Confederate soldier. In his "Reminiscences" he says that the feats performed by the Confederate cavalry in the early part of the war were remarkable, because not one company in ten had any arms that were fit to fight with.

When I joined my company, he writes, they gave me a saber which I think was used in the Revolution, and this was the only weapon I had. One day, while my regiment was standing in a road, I bantered a comrade to see which of us could cut the largest twig from a tree. I made a powerful cut and the blade of my saber broke off at the hilt.

In a short time we were dismounted and ordered to clear the Yankee out of a piece of woods in skirmish formation. We marched through the woods, but fortunately no Yankees were there. I have often wondered what I should have done, armed with that saber hilt, if I had met a Yankee armed with a Springfield musket

There is also a monthly sanitary investigation of all school buildings, their contents, water supply, surroundings, etc.

Mrs. Fannie Fern Andrews, of Boston, has been appointed to take charge of the prize contest of the American School of Peace League. The league has offered two sets of three prizes each, for the best essays on the peace movement. Mrs. Andrews has been interested in peace societies for many years. She also is an enthusiastic clubwoman and an ardent advocate of equal suffrage.

Mrs. Arthur Slade, of New York, is the president of the Ely Club, which has just opened a clubhouse where young women studying for a profession can find a home in New York. A small charge for board will be made and the applicants for membership have to be recommended by some one of the graduates of the Ely school who organized the club and have it in charge. The applicants were so numerous for the present school term that an extra house had to be taken as a dormitory, and there are still in the neighborhood of one hundred on the waiting list.

Recent experiments on showy flowers like the poppy tend to show that insects are not always attracted to flowers by the brightly colored petals, but rather by the perception—doubtless by means of smell—that there is honey or pollen. In these experiments the unopened flower bud is inclosed in a gauze net, so as to protect it from insects, and when it expands the petals are carefully removed without touching the remaining parts with the fingers (for bees avoid a flower if the smell of human fingers is left on it), and the petalless flowers receive practically as many insect visits as untouched flowers do.

The palace of the escurial, in Toledo, built by Felipe II. to commemorate his victory over the French at St. Quentin, is the only building of the kind in the world. It was dedicated to San Lorenzo, and Juan Baptista, the architect, took a gridiron as his model. The bars were represented by rows of magnificently built buildings, and the handle by a superb church. The palace has nearly two thousand rooms, over six thousand windows and doors, and eighty-three staircases, while seventy-three fountains and the contents of forty-eight wine cellars help to assuage the thirst of this monster gridiron's occupants.

Major Sylvester, Washington's chief of police, has made what the Post calls "a wise and timely suggestion," that the horde of guides in the capital be subjected to examination as to their fitness and be compelled to pay a license fee. The Post says: "It is a step which should have been taken long ago, and the proposal can not be put into execution too soon, for some of the Washington guides have displayed a fund of information which, if generally accepted, would necessitate the rewriting of many of the chapters of national history. Not so long ago one of these historians was heard describing to an open-mouthed gathering of credulous victims how Sherman marched his army to the sea over the Anacostia bridge, pointing to the bridge in the distance to prove his new rendering of history, while his auditors responded with a chorus of 'Ohs' and 'Ahs.'"

HOPE HELD OUT AT FATED MINE

More Living Miners Thought to Be Entombed.

WORK IS NOW BEING PUSHED

Spurred by the Emphatic Protest of the United Mine Workers Against Any Further Delay, Together With Indications That There Are Other Living Miners in Death Cavern, the Mining Inspectors Are Rushing the Work of Rescue—A Case of "Too Many Bosses" Is the Way Captain Lattimer, of the Guards, Puts It.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 23.—In the east end of the second level of the St. Paul mine last evening were discovered thirty-eight miners' dead bodies lying face downward, who the coroner stated after examination, had been dead less than forty-eight hours. Fire was raging in the vicinity. They had evidently died from the poisonous gas in the colliery, after a desperate fight for life. Of the twenty miners who were brought to the surface alive Saturday evening, all are recuperating rapidly.

The rescuers in the third vein are making desperate attempts to rescue more than 100 entombed miners thought to be alive in one of the furthest pockets.

One of the miners discovered in the second level, east end, was thought to be still alive and his body was hurried to the hospital car, but the physician declared he had been dead several hours.

Until last night no attempt had been made to enter the third vein of the mine. The discovery of the bodies in the second level, together with an emphatic protest from the United Mine Workers of Illinois against the unwarranted delay, caused the mining inspectors to rush a party of rescuers into the lowest level. According to the mine officials' estimates there are more than 150 miners yet unaccounted for. Many more bodies are believed to be in other parts of the second vein.

More than 100 of the miners are expected to be found alive in the lower vein. While it is known that water has stood several feet deep in the third vein since the disaster, it is said there is an overcast where hundreds of entombed miners could live high and dry. Fresh air has been freely circulating through this vein.

The experts admit the likelihood of saving more of the imprisoned miners. Captains Lattimer and Hall, in command of the collieries, wired Governor Deneen regarding the feasibility of placing the town under martial law, explaining that under martial law the rescue work would be greatly facilitated. The governor decided not to issue such an order at present. There has been much dissension over the way in which the rescue work has been conducted, and experienced miners are censuring the state inspectors in charge. "I hope they will hurry the work and rescue those miners if they are still alive, but there have been too many bosses. That is the trouble," said Captain Lattimer, of the state troops. The fact that these newly found bodies in the east end of the second vein are those of men who died recently has been kept quiet for fear of inflaming public opinion at a time when there is much indignation.

Henry Smith, the first of the rescuers to find the men, returned to the surface and told a graphic story of how some of them were found kneeling as if in prayer, while others were lying face downward.

Farther on the rescuers could see where the men must have dug away an immense fall of earth. No tools were found near the fall, but the marks of fingers were there to show how desperate a fight against death was made. Marks in the hard floor of the tunnel told how the men had dragged themselves foot by foot after days of hard digging through the rock and earth.

BIG STRIKE ON

Forty Thousand Shirtwaist Makers Go Out in New York.

New York, Nov. 23.—The general strike of 40,000 shirtwaist makers, voted for by the Women's Waist Makers' union, went into effect this morning. The strikers demand an increase in wages of 20 per cent for piece work operators and 15 per cent increase for those who are paid by the week.

Local Option Election Today.

Scottsburg, Ind., Nov. 23.—A local option election is being held in this (Scott) county today. The "drys" place their majority as high as 250, while the "wets" are equally as confident, but place no estimate on their vote. The "wets" have thoroughly canvassed the county.

Latest Move in Walsh Case.

FACTORY FOR AEROPLANES

Practical Development of the Wright Machine.

A BIG COMPANY ORGANIZED

Promising to Be Able to Have Aeroplanes Ready For Spring Delivery, a Company Has Been Incorporated in New York to Take Over the Wright Patents and Put the Airships on the Market—Strong Names in the Financial World Back the Enterprise and the Machine Will Be Pushed Into Popular Favor.

New York, Nov. 23.—Declaring its ability to deliver Wright aeroplanes to customers by May 1 next, the Wright company has been formed in New York. Behind it are Cornelius Vanderbilt, the Wrights, Allan A. Ryan, Morton F. Plant, Howard Gould, Andrew Fredman, R. J. Collier, August Belmont, Edward J. Berwind and Russell A. Alger. One of the Wright brothers will be president and the other vice president. Clinton B. Pearson will be a vice president. The company is capitalized at a million and takes over the Wright patents for the United States and Canada. Papers for incorporation have been filed in Albany.

Delancy Nicoll, who will be the counsel for the Wright company, said: "The Wright company will be able to furnish machines for commercial use inside of six months. A factory will be built near Dayton, O. What prices the new machines will be sold at I don't know."

Somebody asked Mr. Nicoll who he thought the buyers would be. "That's easy," he answered. "Anybody can learn inside of two hours to run the Wright machines. Mr. Wright told me that himself. Besides, the Wrights propose to teach purchasers how to run the machines. They will have a corps of demonstrators, most of whom have been trained already, to instruct people in the new art."

He went on to say that the Wrights have purposely desisted from showing off all the possibilities of their machines and that flights of much more sensational character than any that they have performed could be undertaken. The machine as it now stands, he said, is adapted for practical use and can be utilized commercially.

Mr. Nicoll said that he shared the opinion with H. H. Toulmin of Springfield, O., his associate in the Wright company, and an expert in patent law. The stock of the Wright company will not be offered for public subscription. It was explained that the company proposes to control the Wright machines only in the United States and Canada. Foreign rights have been granted elsewhere.

THE PRESIDENT PLEASED

Taft Regards Oil Trust Decision as of the Utmost Importance.

Washington, Nov. 23.—President Taft does not contemplate, it is asserted upon high authority, such radical changes in the Sherman anti-trust law as some of his advisers have insisted were necessary and he himself was believed to have favored. Mr. Taft has been greatly pleased with the decision of the United States circuit court for district of Missouri in the injunction proceedings against the Standard Oil company. He has told callers that he regarded the decision as of the utmost importance.

The Rabbit Escaped.

Carmi, Ill., Nov. 23.—While Harry Voorvart, aged sixteen, and Morris Seigelmeyer, aged twelve, were hunting near Nauvoo, one on either side of a hedge fence, Morris Seigelmeyer, with a 22-caliber revolver, aimed at a rabbit and accidentally shot his companion below the heart. Doctors despair of saving the boy's life.

Leg Will Be Amputated.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 23.—Louis Shively of this city was accidentally shot in the leg while hunting in Parke county. His leg will be amputated.
